Parks and Rides

Through lovely horsey parkland to a pretty village and return via a secluded valley

Distance - 8 km (5 miles)

Walking Time: 2.5 hours

Starts and finishes at the Market Hall: point 1 on the map

Grade A on a scale where A is easy and D difficult (note there are numerous stiles to cross, some of which are a little tricky)

Description

Distance – 8 km (5 miles)

① From under the Market Hall A make your way along Church Street, go past (or pop into) the Parish church of St. Marys' which is said to be one of the earliest and best examples of a Georgian Gothic church. Carry on down the hill and over Bath Bridge B. As the road levels out you will see, to your left, a metal kissing gate. Go through this and continue up the field with the dry stone wall on your right and cross a wooden stile in a wire fence followed by another wooden stile and a third stile just across the driveway leading to a converted barn.

② Keeping the hedgerow on your right, continue to yet another wooden stile. Go over this and into a spinney where you shortly cross first an old stone and then a wooden stile. You are now in a large field; your route lies straight ahead between the trees, after which you will come to two wide wooden gates and a stone stile in a cluster. Go over the stone stile and turn immediately right, and walk between the field's right-hand side wall and wooden right and walk between the field's right-hand side wall and wooden fence. Ignore the hunting gate on the right. (You will make use of this on the return journey.) Some 50 metres further on turn sharply right through a gate and descend a steep slope (very slippery after wet weather). It turns left and then right to lead across an old stone packhorse bridge to a wooden bridge across a tributary stream of the River Avon. Go over the stile into Estcourt Park C, up the rising parkland following the white marker posts. Turn right to a private drive and eventually pass through a gate and alongside the high stone walls of the old gardens of Estcourt House. Immediately after the last house on the right, leave the drive and bear right to a gate in the wooden boundary fence. Cross that field diagonally towards a gate on the far side. (If there are horses in these fields you may prefer to take the permissive path round the fence to reach the gate.) As you proceed note the tidy orderliness of the Park with its neat open-fenced fields with their curved corners to avoid injuries to the Sheikh's valuable stud horses. Go through this gate, over the stile ahead and turn right to another gate. Cross this field to yet another gate slightly to your left. Go through this and across the ride through the gate opposite and follow the field fence; go over the stile in the hedge ahead.

Turning right you will come to the quaintly named Cat and Custard Pot public house E, a recommended stopping point for both drinks and meals.

POINTS OF INTEREST

A MARKET HALL

This fine two storey, attractively restored pillared building, dates back to 1655 and was part of the prosperous wool trade of that time. It has had various uses and has undergone considerable alteration over the years but it is still regarded as the finest example of its kind in the Cotswolds. The Cupola on top was added to celebrate the Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

POINTS OF INTEREST

B BATH BRIDGE

In 1774 the Turnpike commissioners employed a local mason, Thomas Webb, to build a new bridge to provide an easier entrance into the Town for the Bath – Cirencester coach road and it was completed two years later. It is built of coarse rubble and all the arches are of different size although no one seems to know why. It is said to be the 'most outstanding example of an arched dry stone road bridge in the whole of the country'. In 1985 it was granted Grade 2 Listed Building status.

C ESTCOURT PARK

The Estcourt family lived here from 1303 and the Park was created as early as 1515. The original Manor House was replaced by the much larger Estcourt House in 1770 and the estate and pleasure gardens were enlarged and improved throughout the 19th Century. The house itself was demolished in 1963, though the stables, farm buildings and several small houses remain. In 1996 the estate was sold in its entirety, with planning permission for a new principal residence. Thus after seven centuries in their hands, it passed out of the hands of the Estcourt family. The estate, some 1400 acres, is now owned by Prince Khalid bin Abdullah Al Saud. He runs this large important estate as a stud farm.

D CHURCH OF ST JOHN THE BAPTIST

This medieval church, much of which was rebuilt in 1865, has close ties to the Estcourt family and several family members are entombed within as are some of the Hodges, another family important in the early history of Shipton Moyne.

E THE CAT & CUSTARD POT, SHIPTON MOYNE

This was built in the early 1700s by the Estcourt family who built and owned much of this village. The building was an off – license and ale house / village store, a bakery and a post office until 1924 when the Estcourts sold it to the Stroud Brewery Co. The name brings to mind 'Handley Cross' or 'Mr Jorrock's Hunt' and the five other books celebrating life in the English countryside in a bygone age.

F WILTSHIRE BRIDGE

Strictly a causeway as it was built to ease the steep incline into town. The stream running beneath marked the Gloucestershire / Wiltshire border until it was moved in 1939 further out of town to where the old Roman road (Fosseway) crosses the Tetbury to Malmesbury road.
